Housing Agreement

RHODE ISLAND COLLEGE
RESIDENCE HALL, ROOM AND DINING CENTER

- A. ROOM RESERVATION-DAMAGE DEPOSITS AND ROOM FEES REFUND
1. Rooms are contracted for the entire academic year.
 2. Should this contract be broken prior to or during the academic year, the room reservation deposit is non-refundable. Otherwise, the room reservation deposit will be refunded for the spring semester. If a resident withdraws prior to or during the academic year, the damage deposit will be refunded minus any assessed damages. See Section D, item number 2 for further damage deposit information.
 3. Refunds
If a new student withdraws from the College between July 15 and the last business day in December, the room fees will be refunded on a prorated basis from their official date of withdrawal.

If a resident withdraws from the residence halls or the college before July 15 the room and board fees will be cancelled for the year minus the room reservation of $100.

If a resident withdraws from the College between July 15 and the last business day of December, the student's room and board contract will be cancelled for the spring semester. In addition to completing the withdrawal form in the Student Life Office a student must complete the request for release in the Office of Residential Life & Housing.

If a resident wishes to withdraw from housing but remain a student at RIC, he/she must submit a request for release form to the Office of Residential Life & Housing. The resident must provide sufficient information that a release from the contract is appropriate. Approval of the request will be provided in writing and approval is not guaranteed. Residents who do not receive approval will be billed for housing and a meal plan for both semesters whether or not they actually live in housing or use any portion of the meal plan.

However, if the vacated space can be filled, then as determined by the order of withdrawal (by date), a prorated refund of the room fee will be issued. For each semester, the vacating student is responsible for payment until the space is filled, including if the student no longer attends Rhode Island College.
